SNAKE, SURE ENOUGH. A Lively Time on the Night Express.

On the night express south on the St. Mary's road the other day a man who had the appearance of an amateur naturalist, was a passenger in the smoker. He got on at a back country station carrying a heavy box which he deposited on the seat beside him and promptly fell

Among the other passengers were two New York drummers, who relieved the tedium of the night by frequent tips from a black bottle. One of the two soon fell asleep, but the other, who evidently possessed a more formidable capacity for stimulants, clung to the bottle till his wandering gaze attested his condition. Just as the train passed Avon the drummer who was awake suddenly emitted a howl and grasped his companion by the shoulder.

"Great heavens, Charley, did you see that? he asked in terror, as he crept up on the car seat with both feet.

"Ugh," remarked Charley, nonchalantly, half opening his eyes. "Wake up," the other went on terrifieldly. "There's a snake under the seat. I think it is a snake, anyhow, and I want you to tell me whether it is or not."

one eye entirely open. "You got 'em, Luke. Tol' you what'd happen if you didn't quit." "Don't kid me, Charley," said Luke, uploringly. "Wake up and see him for imploringly.

'T'll wish snake," said Charley, with

But Charley by this time felt a yielding substance passing over his shoes, and with a wail of terror he rose to the occasion and joiedn Luke on the top of the car seat. Aroused by the noise, the other passengers rubbed their sleepy eyes and, once awake. began making jests at the expense of the terror-stricken drummers. I thought them fellers would be seein' things afore long," remarked a farmer. "Snakes is so common," put in another. "Why don't you spring a crocodile or two on us?" "Well, I never saw a man with the rams before," a third began, but just then he felt something crawling over his feet, and with a snort of fear, he crept up on the window sill.

One by one the other passengers joined in the minority on the car seats till at length a vote on the snake quesiton would have resulted unanimously in the affirmative. The sleepy brakeman, who was dozing near the stove, finally awoke, and, catching a glimpse of a dark object wiggling aross the aisle carpet he opened the door with a whoop and disappeared. The brakeman told the conductor that a snake was loose in the torward car and that official went to the car door demanding:

'What's the matter in there? You are spoilin' them seats. Git down." There's a snake loose in here," came back the unanimous response. "Come in and catch him. That's what you get your salary for." 'Catch your own snakes," he retorted angrily at the wild eyed drummers. "I ain't in the snake collecting business."

Despairing of succor from this source, the passengers turned their attention to their own number. By this time there was but one person in the car who was not up on his seat, and that was the man with the box, who still slept peacefully in his corner. All sorts of devices were tried to wake him up. Hats, news papers, and books were tossed at him. and finally a well-directed umbrella hit him in the eye and made him jump to his feet with an oath.

"Great blazes," he roared, as he rubbed his injured eye, and caught a glimpse of the passengers standing in their seats. "Is this a branch office of a lunatic asylum, or simply a gang of drunken fools?"
"Get up on your seat," he was adjured.
"There's a snake loose in the car."

"Snake loose," he exclaimed. "Guess it's my Jim. Rattler is he? About five feet long? Yes, that's him. Had him in the box, you know, but he must have erawled out while I was asleep."

"You're an internal idjit," shouted the farmer. "I'll have the law on you."

"Throw him out." "Put him off."

"Squash the old tame snake." The man who owned the box silenced the outery with a wave of the hand. "Gentlemen," be remarked. sorry this isu't a tame snake, but as a matter of fact, he still has his eye teeth, and you'll find him ready for business Better stay up on your seats till I find

Slowly and methodically he prodded under the seats till a warning rattle located the frolicsome Jim. Then, reaching recklessly under the seat, he grasped and hauled out a five-loot rattler, which he lugged back to the box in the corner. After securely clamping the box, he sat down again and quickly fell into a doze. One by one the passengers came down from the car seats, but few could sleep while the threatining box was in the car. When Springfield was reached the man with the box woke up and started "Sorry my Jim disturbed you, gentle-men," he called back from the platform. "Fact is, I forgot to say he is only a toy snake, made up largely of spring and India rubber. One simply winds the spring and he will crawl around till he's run down. It I had time I'd explain this ingenious device which I have just patented. But I get off here. Au revoir."

After that the silence was not broken until the train reached Marlin.— [New York Sun

Barre City Building. A large crowd attended the adjourned Barre city meeting at Armory hall Monday evening. C. F. Camp, chairman of the committee appointed to secure plans for a new city hall building, presented plans designed by Austin & Brigham of Boston. The building calls for brick at a cost of $42,000. The first story is divided into three rooms for school purposes, a court room, police station, li-brary, city clerk's office, city liquor agency, and the second story to contain a room for the city council, an office for mayor and city engineer, and a hall and opera house to hold 1500 persons. It was voted that two sides of the building be made of granite; to erect a memorial tablet in memory of the Union soldiers who enlisted from Barre in the civil war. It was also voted to have a hall to ho'd for the benefit of the poor. 2000 people. The meeting adjourned for

The town meeting last Tuesday was the most largely attended and most interesting meeting held for years. Besides the usual business, election of A. D. Mason, C. A. Choate and Ed. Fulford as selectmen, H. A. Gilfillan as road commissioner, Walter B. Harvey as school director, and filling the other offices, the oidding for taxes was made exciting by the fact that Curt Harvey bid off the collection of taxes for Geo. F. Winch and that the town was so nearly divided as to whether they would accept Geo. Winch as substitute for Curt Harvey or not. Geo. Winch was finally accepted as col-lector of taxes and was made constable. Chas. Choate showed the reason why the town expense appeared to be so large to be because of so many law suits and because quite a number of bills had been paid which had been running for years. Because of the indebtedness and that about $1400 must be paid on the proposed cut under the railroad at McIndoe the town voted to raise $1 25 on a dollar of the grand list. Just before adjournment the town voted emphatically not to allow dancing in the town is that she is alive to-day. No one, perhaps, is more surprised at this than Mrs. Lord herself. She looks back at the day when she stood on the verge of death and shudders. She looks ahead at a life of happiness with her children, her husband and her home with a joy that only a mother can realize.

The most remarkable thing about Mrs. Nellie J. Lord, of Strafford Corner, N. H.,

Mrs. Lord is the mother of three children, two of whom are twins; until the twins came nothing marred the joy of her life.

Then she was attacked with heart failure and for a year was unable to attend to the ordinary duties of the home. In describing her own experience Mrs. Lord says:

"I had heart failure so bad I was often thought to be dead.
"With this I had neuralgia of the stomach so bad it was necessary to give me morphine to deaden the pain.
"Sometimes the doctors gave me temporary relief, but in the end it seemed as if my suffering was multiplied.

"Medicine did me no good and was but an aggravation. I was so thin my nearest friends failed to recognize me. "No one thought I would live.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient.

'Dont Sign Ronds for Anyone and Don't Ask Anyone to Sign for You."

To parties who are required to give bonds: I can furnish you with a bond that will be acceptable to the Probate Court, in cases of administration, executors, guardians, etc., and the premum for the same may be approved by the Court as a legal charge against the estate. It thus saves you the inconvenience of asking your friends to sign bonds for you—which when they do, incurs a liability the same as endorsing a note. Correspond with
